More beauty from within.

For a kitchen, bath or other room that is as functional as it is beautiful, Wood-Mode offers a wide variety of built-in storage and convenience features that unite elegance and efficiency.

More solutions to store your stuff,
more options to stay organized.

Craftsmanship in every form.

The cabinet style you choose is one of three constructed techniques that will subtly influence your design. Each construction style demands its own unique level of expertise and precise craftsmanship—something Wood-Mode has been doing for many years.

1 Framed cabinet styles

The most traditional of cabinet construction styles, “framed” refers to the front of the cabinet box, the face frame. When closed, the doors and drawers cover the opening in the frame and most of the frame itself.

2 Framed inset cabinet styles

Common in the 1800’s, inset styles are reminiscent of vintage, period pieces and inspired themes. A truly custom cabinet, inset doors require a level of precision and fit you won’t find with any mass produced cabinets. Doors and drawers are set within the frame of the cabinet—flush with the front of the cabinet. The doors are often attached to the cabinet with exposed hinges.

3 Frameless cabinet styles

Also referred to as “full access” or “european” cabinets, this style eliminates the front frame allowing more open space to access your things inside. Doors are hinged to the sides of the cabinet and cover the entire front of the cabinet box.

Diverse selection of materials.

In addition to the beauty of natural wood, Wood-Mode offers a wide selection of standard materials to create a unique mix of visual and tactile aesthetics for your space.

PREMIUM LIFESTYLES
MADE IN THE USA

Family-owned and American made.

From the first cabinet built in a small Pennsylvania lumber mill in 1942 to custom kitchens completed in our state-of-the-art facility today, each and every Wood-Mode cabinet is proudly made in the USA.

Seventy years of growth has not changed our approach to building cabinetry. The skill and dedication of the individual woodworker is still at the heart of Wood-Mode quality. Our staff family includes as many as three generations of highly skilled craftsmen working side by side. From the selection of the lumber to our celebrated finish, a majority of the cabinetry making process is still completed by hand.

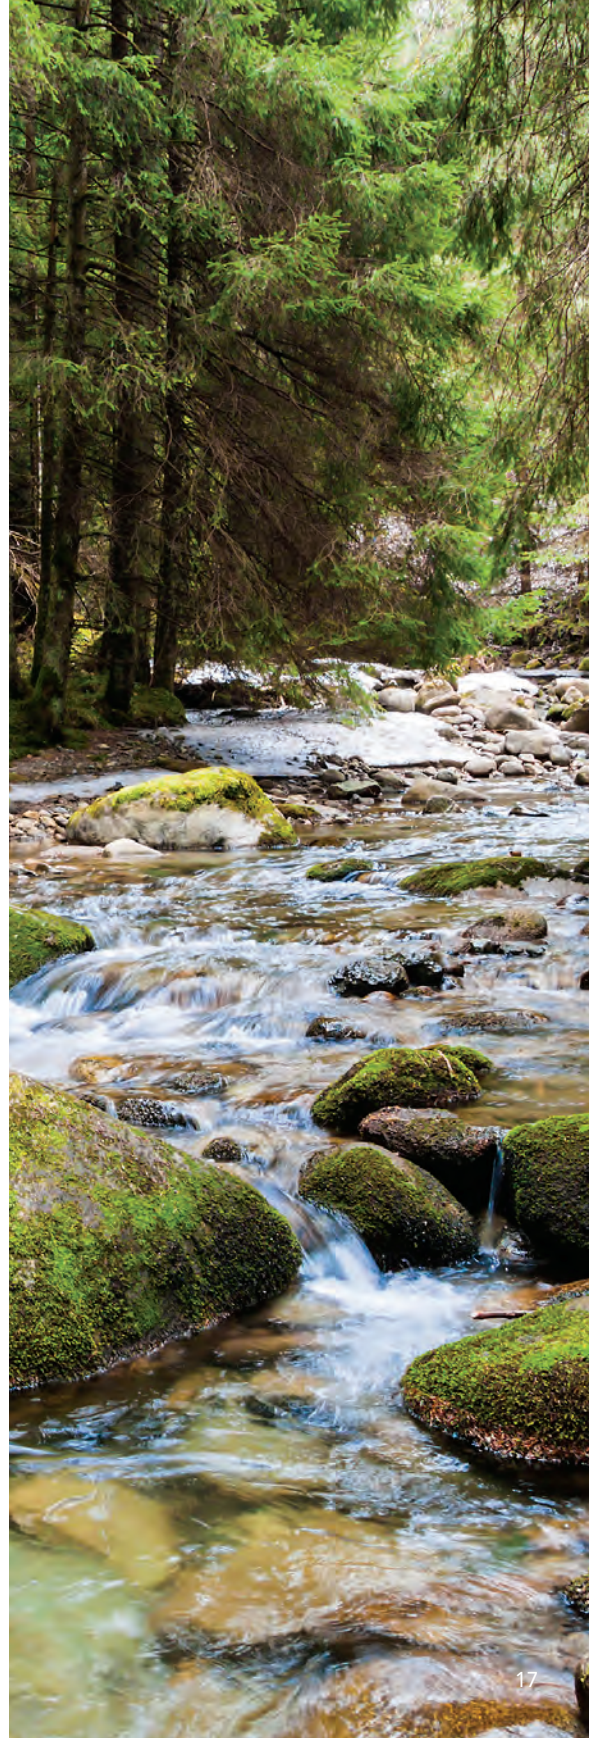

While technology enables us to fulfill more dreams with consistently impeccable quality, even the automated portions of our construction process are overseen by experienced cabinetmakers. At each and every stage, from lumber selection and milling to finish and assembly, it is the knowledge of the American craftsman that makes Wood-Mode a leader in fine custom cabinetry.

A caring commitment to the environment.

Wood-Mode has been practicing environmental stewardship for more than 25 years—long before “being green” was popular. From a self-sustaining unit that eliminates 99.4% of all emissions to using sawdust and scrap to fuel and power much of the operation, Wood-Mode takes pride in producing the industry’s highest quality cabinetry in a manner that demonstrates its genuine concern and care for the environment.
